MESSAGE TO VICTORIA MERCHANTS

If you are reading this message it will indicate two things to you as a business man. First, the advertisement is designed in such a manner as to arrest your attention as a merchant and advertiser or possible advertiser. It is not intended to "stop" all readers, but merely those interested in the product we have to sell.

Secondly, it will mean that this message is being displayed at a time when you have found it convenient to read it. You didn't miss it if you didn't read your paper immediately and if you wish to refer to it again you may do so at your convenience.

As a merchant these two factors are very important to you. Through Victoria's Daily Newspapers your advertising message is delivered into virtually every home in Metropolitan Victoria. It may not be read by all readers but it will be read by all prospects for your product or service if the advertisement itself is designed in such a way as to appeal to them.

These same prospects may refer to your advertisement again and again. They can show it to other members of their families at their convenience, and if what you have to offer is what they want at a price they can afford and at a time when they want to make the purchase, these prospects will become customers.

If you are not using daily newspapers as your basic advertising medium now, we recommend that you do so today . . . The services of the layout and copy department of Victoria Press Limited are available without charge to advertisers in The Daily Colonist and Victoria Daily Times.

Further information on newspaper advertising may be obtained from one of our sales representatives or by phoning Mr. Sidaway, Retail Advertising Manager of Victoria Press Limited at 382-7211.

ter Diefenbaker and Liberal Leader Pearson, protagonists in a parliamentary drama soon to unfold, confronted each other Friday on what may become a big issue of the opening days of the new Parliament.

The session opens Thursday.

Mr. Pearson, at the prime minister's request, called at Mr. Diefenbaker's reast Block office and informed him of the Liberal view that Parliament should not proceed with any legislative action until the Commons decides whether to vote confidence or non-confidence in Mr. Diefenbaker's minority administration.

The Liberal leader said in an address in Toronto earlier in the week that no assurance has been five play any other party leader of any confidence in the Diefenbaker government.

A combination of the three opposition groups—Liberals, Social Credit and New Democratacould defeat the government and bring about a December election, the first time in Canadian history that two elections would be held in one year.

The Liberal leader said in an address in Toronto earlier in the week that no assurance has been given by any other party leader of any confidence in the Diefenbaker government.

The Liberal leader is pledged to moving a non-confidence motion in his first speech in Parliament, which would occur during the throne speech debate.

This normally would not be voted on for several days and in that period the government has the option of substituting other business and thus postponing a test of voting strength.

The Liberal MPs and the 30 Social Credit and 18 New Democratic members outnumbered the Progressive Conservation in the speech from the throne outling the government's legislative program.

No Money for Peace

WHEN THE UNITED NATIONS W was created at the close of the Second World War various devices were incorporated in the hope of guaranteeing that the machinery would work. The system of Security Council, General Assembly, Secretariat, and the various committees seemed logical and reasonably able to operate.

The checks and counter-balances, the safeguards and security written into the charter seemed adequate. It was not, perhaps, envisioned that the work of the UN might be curbed, halted, even destroyed, through lack of funds. But though the organization has now more than doubled its original membership, to 108, the financial membership, to 108, its financial situation is more precarious than ever before, its operations threat-ened by bankruptcy.

The situation has arisen in two ways. First, a number of nations have become delinquent in their annual membership dues from which the regular work of the UN is financed. Secondly, a number of countries—particularly in the Soviet blook have refused to provide the bloc-have refused to provide the special assessments requested to finance peace keeping operations such as have been set up in the Congo, the Suez and other places.

Search among the logs at the lake edge and you will find fresh-water sponges, watch the quiet waters and you may possibly see a trout jump.

Many vears ago the lake was used as a log dump for a sawmill, and the debris on the bottom of the lake has created a home for many kinds of water creatures.

Adlal Stevenson, the United States spokesman in the UN, to urge all the member nations to fulfil their obligations in financing the group, not to "doom our organization to impotence," "to survive from day to day by passing a cup like a beggar in the street." And he advised that support was more than ever needed because "that has led Mr. As you wonder along the trail you say wonder along the trail you wonder along the trail yo to day by passing a cup like a beggar in the street." And he advised that support was more than ever needed because of the increasing problems, the increasingly prevalent threats to world peace that are now to be seen on every hand.

Since the law makes voting compulsory, each person who did not vote is liable to a fine of about $4.50. The Commonwealth electoral officer will ask the defaulters why they falled to do their duty. Those who cannot satisfy him will find themselves in court.

The circumstances in which Alistralia became the first English-speaking country to enact compulsory voting 38 avears ago compose one of the strangest without one House in 42 minutes without one House in 42 minutes, without one division.

The Labor Opposition welcomed it as a certain vote-getter. The government was ready to oblige, though its approval was tacit. Enrolment by electors had laready been made compulsory vand Sendardy been made compulsory voting sould get the best results from compulsory enrolment.

Now local authorities are resorting increasingly to compulsory voting, which is part of Labor's municipal platform.

Compulsion suits all parties so well that none is likely to move its abolition. It has raised the proportion of voters exercising the franchise to the highest in the democratic world. It immensely reduces the cost of party organization at elections by leaving to the law, instead of the party, the obligation to get the voter to the poll.

Bulky Figure

It is true that the self-restraint is not exercised as often as it might be, particularly in literature, where the bulky figure of Thomas Wolfe stands by his even bulkier works as an awful warning or the fourto writers who run over at the foun-tain-pen. But when an American writer does value economy he can produce works that have a truly 18th century

Nathanael West, for instance, left us two Voltairean masterpieces in "Miss Loneiyhearts" and "The Day of the Locust": perhaps they will be treated with the importance that is their due when the younger academics have got over their love-affair with F. Carried to excess, this vital energy has been the downfall of many, but where the dynamic principle has been tempered by some measure of self-restraint it gives a gusto and a zest to works and ways that act like a tonic on a rundown European, or a work worn Canadian.

I have an especial admiration: John Canaday of the New Yorker. These two exemplify for me the outstanding quality of the best American Journalism: they have both sense and sensibility; they are objective and expensibility; they are objective and of Modern Art, of Jean Tinguely's port their convictions; and they both law a light touch and a gift for the works and ways that act like a tonic on a rundown European, or a work worn Canadian. felicitous phrase that neatly parcels the picture or the musical performance that they are discussing.

OTTAWA ... It's an interesting coincidence, if coincidence it be, that Quebec's Premier Lesage has called a general election at a time when Liberal leader Pearson is doing his best to bring on a federal election.

Back in 1945 Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Tory premier of Ontario, George Drew, played a game of election date ticktacktoe that is worth recalling in light of the Lesage-Pearson strategies.

Drew knew he was a shoo in for a second term: like Lesage, he had only been elected two years previously.

The federal Tories under John Bracken The federal Tories under John Bracken believed they had a good chance to turf out King by capitalizing on popular dissatisfactions with the Liberals' wartime record, such as conscription, controls and taxes. They reasoned that a resounding election victory by Drew just before the federal vote would help them win a majority in Parliament.

Drew waited for King to set his date, June 11, and then leaped in with a June 4 date for the Ontario election, which he won handily. But despite the fine stratagem of the federal Tories, King squeaked back with the federal Tories, King squeaked back with a tiny majority a week later.

Quebec will be the critical province for the Grits in the next election, whether the vote be this fall or next spring. They lost the election in Quebec because of the 26 seats that Social Credit took there. And there's a good deal to the point of view that they lost in Quebec because Lesage gave the national Liberals only moral support. He and his ministers failed to get out on the hustings and fight for the election of Liberal candidates.

This will entail routing Real Caouette's Creditistes Sociales, the militant Quebec arm of the Social Credit party. But Lesage doesn't need a crystal ball to see that the Creditistes are a potential threat to his administration.

All of this backroom politicking, if such it be that has produced the prospect of juxtaposition of federal and Quebec elections, will come to naught if the Socreds vote in the Commons to keep the government in office.

There is no predicting what they will do, except a generalization that they will act in what they believe to be their own best interests. And they may not want to take on Mike Pearson and Jean Lesage at the same time.

THE BIG PUSH: A Portrait of the Battle of the Somme. London: Cassell, 1961. Pp. 177, 35.33;
(Reviewed by G. S. McCaughey, Boyal Roads.)
Of all the legacies of the American Civil War, perhaps one of the most important is Sherman's oft-quoted maxim, "War is Hell."

Today it is a recognized axiom; would to God it had 100ay it is a recognized axiom; would to God it had been so by General Sir Douglas Haig and the myopic sycophants who surrounded him in his splendid little world of cavairy, wine, and French chateaux. But as Sherman had pointed out, "It is only those who have neither fired a shot nor heard the shrieks and groans of the wounded who cry aloud for blood, more vengeance, more desclation."

more desolation."

Had Haig deigned to read American newspapers, he would have been sharply reminded of this reality by a reprinting of Sherman's speech which appeared in the Washington National Tribune on Nov. 26, 1914.

But so blinded was he by the shine on his own splendid riding boots, and so far did he remain removed from "the shrieks and groans of the wounded" that history can accord him the dubious paim of being the British General who did more to annihilate the Army of the British Empire than all the combined enemies that Empire had to face in its long history. had to face in its long history.

A resurgence of interest in the hideous debacle of World War I has brought to the reading public two books that splendidly complement each other.

In Cavenant with Death John Harris, a veteran of the Second World War (author of The Sea Shall Not Have Them), tells the story of a "Kitchener" battalion from its inception in a Yorkshire city to its decimation on July 1, 1915. July 1, 1916.

July 1, 1916. By making his narrator, Mark Fenner, a private soldier, Mr. Harris manages to well reconstruct the emotions of the day from the high, patriotic fervour in the early days of the war, a fevour of enthusiasm that enabled the British government to field its first full-sized army of superb volunteers, to the final crushing disilutions.

A WRITER'S DIARY

By HUGH MocLENNAN

Only once have I tried to write an historical novel, and I doubt if I will ever try again. The historical novel is by all odds the hardest field in which any artist can choose to work.

It is difficult enough to persuade yourself that you can understand anything important about your own time; it is a hundred times more difficult, unless you are blessed with a singular naivete, to believe that you can put your creative imagination into the souls of people who lived before nine-tenths of the knowledge which formed your own mind had come into being.

True, publishers issue a del This may be why I find them unuge of "historical" novels and millions of people love them.

This may be why I find them unreadable.

Somehow I can't see Columbia

epticism was present along more?

Throughout the novel, Mr. Harris skilfully conveys the growing sense of realization on the part of his narra-tor of the gap between the war in reality, and the war tor of the gap between the war in reality, and the war as seen by those responsible for its prosecution. From the constant practice in bayonet fighting (despite the dour comment of the experienced soldier, "you'll never get near enough to stick your bayonet in 'em... You' see a lew different shaped 'ats over the next traverse and that'll be it. If you're quick with your bombs, you'll get 'em; if you're not, then they'll get you'') to the stubborn notion held by Haig himself of the superiority of cavalry over such noisy mechanical inventions as the machine gun (see Haig's own Cavalry Studies).

Should any reader who has not personally experienced the First World War think that Mr. Harris in anyway exaggerates or embellishes, let him try Brian Gardner's cool, detached, and completely documented account of the first battle of the Somme. The Big Push. In short, clipped, almost too brief chapters, Mr. Gardner takes us through the same story as Mr. Harris. Only here is no fictionalized account but the hideous truth of the whole same story, from the raising of the Kitchener Army of volunteers to its utter decimation, in a totally ill-conceived, badly handled assault that was to cost the British Empire 500,000 casualties, 60,000 in the first few hours of that black day, July I.

Mr. Gardner, using a host of source material and a wealth of well chosen quotation, spares no one from Asquith ("He was perhaps impressed most of all by Haig's old brandy."), Lloyd George ("I have a feeling that all which assiduity, the care, and the trained thought of a great soldler can accomplish, is being done."), General Sir William Robertson, CIGS ("He answered arguments with, Tve heard different"), to Charteris and Kiggell, Haig's intelligence officer and chief of staff respectively.

And, of course, Haig, in all his splendid isolation from reality, his narrowness of mind, his priggish arrogance; "Some of their divisional generals (the Anzac Corpa) are so ignorant and like many colonials) so concelted, that they cannot be trusted to work out unaided the plans of attack."

This because the Australians had been plans of stack."

the plans of attack."

This because the Australians had been hurled into an attack against the no longer existent village of Pozieres immediately on arrival in the line; hurled into an impossible situation without any direction, instruction, and with the ultimate loss of three divisions after holding a redout that amounted to no more than a sea of mud entirely unprotected from enemy artiliery fire. There was also his stubborn retention of a belief in cavalry. "The advance is to be pressed eastwards far enough to enable our cavalry to push through into the open country beyond the enemy's prepared lines of delence."

Yet had this pipe dream of the pre-machine was asso enemy's prepared lines of defence."

Yet had this pipe dream of the pre-machine gun age ever become actuality, Haig had not even prepared himself for the use of his "splendid shining lances." The cavalry was on orders which read vaguely that it was to "interfere with the railways, along which hostile reinforcements might arrive, and to raid various enemy HQ's which were seven or eight miles behind the front."

Thus a state of mind which was held by Haig and company to the bitter end of that bitter war as witness the Armistice Day comment: "Thank God we can now get back to real soldiering."

In fact, the only glimmer of light in that dark page of British military history that was the Battle of the Somme

British military history that was the Battle of the Somme lies in the recorded criticism of one, Winston Churchill, who fought desperately to break the fetters of the mentally shackled people about him.

Of Sir Douglas Haig one can fittingly, then, paraphrase, "never before in the history of British arms, were to many men so stupidly slaughtered, to such little avail, by such a blind few."

Six Attractive Events For Musical Art Season

recital, ushers in an attractive Musical Art Society season of six concerts.

All events with the exception of the annual Carol Tea, Saturday, Dec. 15, at the Empress Hotel, will take place at Oak Bay Junior High School.

First Wednesday of each month, except November, will be regular concert dates. The November concert, a piano recital by internationally known Canadian musician Boris Roubakine, has been necessarily set forward to Oct. 29 in order to meet the pianist's other commitments.

RARE BLEND

On Dec. 5, an unusual and imaginative blending of choral and ballet arts will present the Vera Barclay Singers and Bebe Eversfield dance group in recital.

For the Carol Tea, a pro gram of carols and other Christmas music will be per-formed by Richard Proudman

We were talking with a group of friends the other day when the conversation turned to magazines. Merits and virtues of various periodicals were batted back and forth and personal references voiced.

As I listened my mental thermometer began to soar dangerously. Among all the magazines named not one person mentioned a Canadian title.

"Don't any of you read Canadian title.

"It turned out that only three of a group of eight — myself asked one of the group, "that asked one of the group, "that

By PETER DUNN Canadian Press Staff Writer

The stock market took its sharpest setback in two months this week, with the downward tendancy accelerating as the week progressed.

Industrials fell almost 10 index points on the week - eight of them in the last two days. Even speculators appeared disenchanted as the furious trading pace seen of the last two weeks calmed down and action returned to normal.

Canadian Oil was foremost among the mavericks, buoyed by still another rumor concerning impending takeover. Whis pers centred on the possibility that Phillips Petroleums, huge U.S. firm, were prepared to of-fer $44 a share to Canadian Oil shareholders, but the rumor brought a "no comment" from Canadian officials

Men Run Nature At Saanichton

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Daffodils in October-violets in November-

This and many other wonders could actually happen today at the Saanichton Dominion Experimental Farm, one of Canada's most modern equipped farm research centres, celebrating its golden iversary next month.

Its got everything from an elaborate precision built sprinkler to specially lighted chambers were plants caube made to flower at any given time.

It's a far cry from the day when men in October, 1912, began clearing the land for the 50-acre farm. The property was sold to the federal government by the B.C. Electric and was heavily treed. There were no buildings, and no equipment.

and no equipment.

It was first operated by a foreman-manager by the name of S. Spencer. He planted annuals, ornamentals and fruit trees and shrubs imported from France.

The farm's first superintendent was Lionel Stevenson,

Original Work on Shrubs

At first the research policies of the farm were chiefly confined to ornamental shrubs and small fruits, but as time went by these were changed to other farming activities, such as dairying and cereals.

In the thirties, for example, the farm specialized in livestock and owned one of the finest Jersey herds in Canada. The animals were sold in 1938.

Over the years, hundreds of farmers have benefited from its research programs into plant diseases, weed control, bulb vegetable and fruit variety experiments, irrigation and soils.

It also introduced into British Columbia many ornamentals which today are used for landscaping Victoria homes.

A milestone in the farm's history took place in 1960 when it was re-organized. The entomology laboratory and plant pathology laboratory, both formerly operated as separate units under the department of agriculture, were amalgamated with the farm.

Another big development was the construction of a $100,000 greenhouse, believed to be the most modern in North America, Temperatures, moisture and ventilation are handled by remote control.

400 Visitors This Year

This, as well as other improvements, plus the farm's research programs, has made Saanichton a sort of a "Mecca" for scientists living in other parts of the world: This year more than 400 scientists and university students from Europe and the United States have visited the centre. Today the farm is mainly specializing on ornamentals and small fruits. It is also seeking ways to improving the Island's greenhouse industry which has suffered serious setbacks in the last five years.

serious setbacks in the last five years.

In charge of the scientific farm institution is Harry Andison, one of Canada's top entomologist. Next in seniority is Jack Crossley, widely known as a leading authority on ornamentals.

Other scientists include R. M. Adamson, Dr. R. G. Atkinson, Dr. D. J. Ballantyne, Dr. J. T. Gillingham, E. F. Maas, W. R. Orchard, N. V. Tonks and R. H. Turley.

In addition there are some 40 other employees, including technicians.

Scots Regiment Color Ceremony Sunday at 2:45

The old colors of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) will be "laid away" in a colorful dedication service at Christ Church Cathedral Sunday, starting at 2:45 p.m.

They will later be hung in the cathedral.
This follows the presentation of new colors to the regiment by its colonel-in-chief, Princess Mary the Princess Royal, June 16.

Phillip Geoffrey Gilbert, a retired geologist, will address the Unitarian Fellowship in the War Amputations' Hall, 1610 Oak Bay Avenue, Sunday at 8 p.m.

His subject is "A History of the First Unitarian Church in Victoria."

The Unitarian Fellowship hopes to re-establish a Unitarian church in Victoria within the next year or two. The old church was founded early in the century but closed its doors around 1929.

The new Westview Gospel Chapel, 313 Brunswick Place, off Highway 1 at Tillicum, will open Sunday with services at 9:45 a.m., 11:30 a.m., and 7 p.m.

Central Baptist Church is planning an extensive building program that will more than double its present facilities for Sunday school classes and provide a new auditorium. More than 335 children attended Sunday school last Annual service of dedication for members of Victoria and Saanich Deaneries Sunday School Teachers' Association will be held in St. John's Anglican Church Sunday at 7:30 p.m.

Preacher will be Rev, Kenneth M. King, DD, president of the association. A social hour will follow.

At First United Church Sunday, Rev. A. I. Higgins will speak on "The Inescapable God" in the morning and on "The Transforming Power" in the evening.

A reception will be held in the Fellowship Hall after the evening service for Mr. and Mrs. J. Roberto Wood, who retired recently after directing the choir for 14

Rev. Emma Smiley conducts both services in Victoria Truth Contre Sunday. In the morning sie will speak on "The Intuition of Intimidation" and in the evening on "Help Yourself to Wholeness."

Miss Frances Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Weils of Florence Street, is taking no chances on the species of spider that's just loomed onto the horizon. With the current tendency of the "Black Widow" to bite its unsuspecting victim, a gal just can't be too careful!

Wet feet, a highly-polished bathroom floor and a mad dash to answer the telephone provide the ingredients for a potential fall for Linda Bishop, daughter of Sgt. John Bishop, RCMP, and Mrs. Bishop of Pacific Avenue. Linda is 18 and taking her second year in education at Victoria College.

Very few families get through the early stages of bringing up children without that crucial moment when young John or Mary have to be rescued by Dad after having locked themselves in the bathroom. Help is just an arm'r length away for four-year-old Judy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Marston of Beach Drive, as her tears ease and Dad engages in a little legal house-breaking.

Lazy Indian summer days are made for afternoon snacks think the children of Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Sullivan as they prepare for action on the back patio of "Kingsmount," their home on Denison Road. However, the picnic may well be exchanged for a fast trip to the hospital if Stephen, left, and his brother, Michael forget to avoid the toys left strewn around by Matthew, four, and Maureen, three.

Mrs. N. T. Long demonstrates how a dress-maker's dummy can become an occupational hazard as she works on the bottom hem of one of her creations in her Pemberton Road home, Lt. Cmdr. Long, RCN, and Mrs. Long have three children, Annette, 12; Mark, 10, and Lesley, six. A skilled seamstress, Mrs. Long is kept busy making clothes for herself and her young family.

With more and more time spent within the home walls during fall and winter, it's well to be on one's guard against accidents that total up to a 50-per-cent share of all that are reported. Although records show that home accidents have had a gradual decline through the years, the average household appears to be still much of a "clumsy oaf." One local hospital reports a total of 62 accidents being treated during one week in their emergency department. Of these, 32 were attributed to falls, six to burns, 19 to cuts and five to children helping themselves to ominous doses of stove oil, aspirin, pills, turpentine or garden spray.

The other major hospital also categories falls in the home as the greatest danger with punctures by nails, do-it-yourselfers stabbed with alivers and insect stings adding to the casualty list. And, of course, there's always the curious tot who's pushed a stone up one of his nostrils!

Dolls are a source of great delight—and, sometimes, trouble. One surgeon who recently removed some tonsils from a young patient was shocked when, peering down the patient's throat, he was met by the glare of a glass eye! It had disappeared from the little girl's doll 18 months before.

Other freak accidents have seen a man accuse his false teeth of biting him when he sat on them, after having taken them out and tucked them into a rear pocket; a woman tumbling into a lily pond, and a professional man wrenching his knee after kicking out at a cockroach.

All this does not mean that one has to don a steel helmet and walk warily while tasting the comforts of home life. But it is worthwhile checking to see that the risk of ending up on the sick list is cut to a Flattering though they may be, spike heels are dynamite when combined with a polished floor and a scatter rug. Apprehensive hostess is Miss Bonnie Dennis, 19-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dennis of Parklanda Drive. Bonnie is an art student at Victoria College.

Clothes For Pre-Teens Who Love Chocolate Cake By PENNY SAVER

At long last the garment industry has realized that some little girls find chocolate cake so irresistable they can no longer fit into pre-teen clothes.

If you are the proud owner of such little girls you will be interested in the dresses made for "chubbles."

These clothes are made specifically for chubby girls. They are made with extra wide bodices, roomy sleeves and larger waistbands.

There is no need for the over-size 12-year-old to dress in clothes that are styled for the older teen-ager.

These styles are smart for school or party and there are many different colors and fabrics to choose from—prints, wools and corduroys are some that Penny looked at for $8.98.

It is a bargain in more ways than one—you get all the extra material for the same price as the regular size.

Skirts and alim Jims are also made for the robust figure. The waist is larger as well as having an elasticized section in the band.

In the same store there is a new assortment of winter coats for toddlers. Soft and fluffy orion duffle coats with hoods are $11.98. They are lightweight, warm, moth and mildew resistant, water repellent and most important, washable.

For a few more dollars you can have coat, leggings and cap. The most fashionable outfit was made of red velvet with an orion pile lining at $18.98. Fashion suggests that fur should be worn as a lining this season.

Washable nylon quilted dressing gowns are warm and dainty in a pink floral pattern with lace trim for tots and teens. For tots up to 6% the price is $2.98 and up to 14%, $5.98.

If you think you have a "chubby" in your home, phone Penny at 382-3131.

Both North players chose to open with one diamond. The American East overcalled with two clubs. South went to two hearts and West jumped to three no-trump. The defence cashed the first four tricks and West made the rest of the score 600 points for a vulnerable game.

The Italian East elected to pass-considerably better action than a club overcall. The American South jumped to four hearts. West looked at kis two sure trump tricks and ace and king of spades and doubled.

The defence was easy ace of spades. (This Italian pair leads ace from ace-king.) He continued with the king after receiving a come-on in the suit. Then he shifted to a low club so the detence had four Garnons Williams

TORONTO (CP)—Oil should be flowing from the Alberta far sands by late 1965 if there are no hitches, Donald J. Wilkins, president of Great Canadian Oil Sands Limited, said Friday night.

He was commenting on Fiday's recommendation by the Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board that his firm should develop the ares.

"We've been working toward this since 1955," he said in an interview.

Mr. Wilkins said he thinks the Alberta government will approve the board's recommendation.

Great Canadian Oil Sands, a Dominion incorporation of 1954, came under the direction of Fry and Company, a Toronto final sis also president, in 1855.

Fry did private financing for Great Canadian Sands at that time to further its object of developing the sands, he said, Eastern Canada refineries of Canadian Oil Company Limited, a subsidiary of Sun Oil and Canadian Oil Company, a Toronto final shared it with the other two firms.

Gets Alberta Clearance

By JOHN MATTERS
CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation
Board has paved the way for commercial development of the Athabasca oil sands, believed to be the largest known reserve of oil in the world.

The board, a body whose recommendations have seldom been rejected by the Alberta cabinet, said Friday Great Canadian Oil Sands Limited should be given the right to extract oil from a portion of the sticky sands which cover an area of about 30,000 square miles in north-eastern Alberta.

"The board believes it is in the interests of the province that some commercial development or the oil sands take place in the near future," said the conservation board's report. The board said the improved outlook for Alberta crude has reduced the impact of the project on conventional crude oil production would not be serious.

The sands are estimated to contain 300,000,000,000 barrels oil.

Authorities estimate that only 1,500,000,000 barrels of 14 square miles is ejo-

The debate on hospital financing this week ended in a draw: everybody finished confused.

The trouble was everyone was using different sets of figures—all legitimate—to prove either that hospitals weren't getting their fair share or that they were getting more than their share, or just enough. It was just proof that in politics everybody can be partly right.
But one of the side issues of the debate is worth a closer look.

It's the argument about allocating certain revenues for specific expenditures.

Hospital officials said they should get two-fifths of the 5 per cent social services. Premier Bennett said it would be What he meant was that the Revenue Act says
